In this webinar, faculty and leadership from Chapman University's new Fowler School of Engineering will discuss their approaches to the teacher-scholar model within the context of an R2 university. Topics of discussion will include:

- How can we support research excellence without optimizing for perverse incentives or downplaying the importance of teaching?
- How can we elevate the educational mission with student experiences at the center of our approaches?
- How can faculty find the freedom to define and evolve their individual paths while being assured that they are delivering value to the university as a whole?

Come join us for what is certain to be a dynamic discussion of the present and (possible) future of the faculty experience.
